JACK-OF-ALL-TRADES, MASTER OF NONE ONE - WRITING!

The well-traveled (see his bio) Frank Baldwin had his first book published in 1997. He's pounding away on the final (ha-ha!) rewrite of his second novel, an erotic thriller, to be published by LITTLE, BROWN, probably in the Fall. He has had lecture/book tours in the U. K. and in Japan, as well as speaking at the Los Angeles Times "Festival of Books" and the Peninsula Branch Jack London Writers Conference.

Baldwin will tell us about some of his adventures in the publishing and movie worlds. And he'll talk, too, about the craft of writing -- some of the lessons he's learned and some of the most common mistakes that sabotage novels and novelists.

Frank Baldwin is a member of the Peninsula Branch of CWC. He lives in San Francisco with his wife, Lora.
